DHIA Dairymen Lead In Increased Production

Dairy herd improvement association herds are way out front when it comes to increased milk production per cow, says W. S. Griffith, dairy specialist at VPI.

Even 20 years ago the DHIA herds were proving their prowess. In the 10 years 1929-38, all cows showed a 4 pound annual increase to end the period with an average production of 4,448 pounds. In contrast, DHIA cows in the same period showed an annual increase of 46 pounds, to end the period with a 7,831 pound average production.

In the years 1938-48, all cows increased production by 45 pounds per year, to finish the period with a 5,610-pound average. DHIA cows showed an increase of 84 pounds a year, and finished the period with an average production of 8,675.
